Alaska Seal Fisheries

Washington, September 9.—Special Treasury Agent George R. Tingley has made a report to the Alaska seal fisheries, which will be published in the annual report of the secretary of the treasury. The report is based upon the work done by the agent while on the islands in the summer of 1886, when he was authorized to go to the islands and investigate the methods of killing seals, and to report whether any changes were necessary in the present regulations. The number of pups killed for the year 1886 was limited to 30,000, and the number of old seals to 7,500. The number of pups killed was 29,971, and the number of old seals killed was 7,500. The number of seals killed on the islands during the season of 1886 was 60,000, and the number of seals killed on the islands during the season of 1887 was 60,000. The number of seals killed on the islands during the season of 1888 was 60,000. The number of seals killed on the islands during the season of 1889 was 60,000. The number of seals killed on the islands during the season of Senator Voorhees made one or two good points in regard to the veterans' pension bill. The first of these I read from had the following: "I return this bill without my approval, having assured myself that the woman in whose behalf it is asked is already on the pension roll for $30 a month, and that only gives her $35, and she had better hold on to what she has." Another veto has this quotation: "I return this bill, having assured that the man in whose behalf it was passed died last February, and is not living and has not been for about four months."

We have published interesting accounts of the celebrations of birthdays of distinguished men. It is pleasant to record the celebration of the birthday of a man, who while not very distinguished, has had a very full life. Mr. Seth Davis, who taught school for more than half a century at Newton Mass., was on Tuesday last years old on September 3d. A large number of his pupils gathered to celebrate this birthday of the old school master. The gathering was at the home of Mr. Davis, and was held under large trees which he had planted eighty years ago. Many of the pupils have become prominent in life. Among the number is Miss C. Sumner Rice. The Rev. Dr. Putnam, author of "My Country 'tis of Thee," was also one of which the following is an account:

[illegible]

Senator Voorhees on Tuesday evening by request addressed the Arapahoe club in Denver and one of the most interesting addresses that has been delivered in Denver for a good while. It was largely on Thomas Jefferson, as the Democratic party, but a very able and timely political speech which might have the title, "Why Is Not a Citizen of Colorado to be a President?" He discussed very fully the various territorial additions made to this country, in which we are peculiarly interested. He gives the credit [illegible] for these additions. He also took up the subject of silver and made out a very favorable record for the Democratic party on this subject. We [illegible] all the considerations that he draws, but must recognize the wide information ability and [illegible] which his address shows. A [illegible] part of the address was at the close when he predicted that at the next session of congress a bill would be introduced in place of the dependent pension bill, and receive the signature of President Cleveland. So much good will to Colorado is shown throughout the speech that it would have been much better if the reception had been given by some organization not political.

Our readers may be getting a little tired of the Indian war, but the matter will probably be before the public for some time to come. It is quite evident that there will be a good deal of scandal regarding the conduct of Kendall and his forces. The Republican of yesterday published an interview with Sheriff Hooper regarding the number of Indians [illegible] and the conduct of Sheriff Kendall and his posse. The account is very specific and leaves no doubt that we have had for the last two or three weeks. We continued it to the Herald-Democrat which publishes a great many words from the front about the Ute war, but no facts. The statement of Sheriff Hooper agrees with all that has been said by the soldiers at the front. The whole affair is a disgrace to the state. For the disgrace, our soldiers are not responsible, but those who care for the honor of our state should not rest until they may not appear to be accomplices of Kendall. We hope the state authorities can in some way appoint a investigating committee which will put the responsibility for all the dishonor and conduct of the campaign where it belongs. There is no effort to excite the just anger of the associate of Kendall and Chief but did not [illegible] for his own benefit should receive the

The Congregationalist does not [illegible] unfavorable looks if we are becoming morally [illegible] people. It bases its [illegible] because of the great trade of New York and Chicago politics. We do not think its answer is a very good one. It infers that we are becoming worse. The prompt public condemnation and the conviction of the leaders in those courts all show that [illegible] The [illegible] rule on moral questions is sound. Public theft may not [illegible] a very bad [illegible] of affairs. It would [illegible] winks at this theft and does not punish it there is void [illegible] of general moral [illegible]. The Herald Standard in [illegible] ruling on this article takes the [illegible] gloomy view that the Congregationalist does and suggests the [illegible] be given to [illegible] of principles in our public schools. The last suggestion is a good one, but it cannot be accomplished through the text book. It can only be accomplished by having teachers who have a true sense of honor. There are [illegible] of teachers in our schools who affect knowledge they do not possess and try to creep out of mistakes that they make. Scholars are frequently taught enough to understand this deception and of course it has a bad effect on them. There is an effort now to drive [illegible] through the [illegible] Until recently Mrs. Ord refused all offers for its purchase, but finally sold it to Mr. Gunther for $1,000, a third of the price originally asked.

"You cannot imagine how I regretted to part with the table," said Mrs. Ord, when [illegible] feeling. "Mrs. Grant would do, so did Colonel Fred Grant and many others, but they would not pay the price. General Ord thought a great deal of the relic, and was always particular about it. He [illegible] when the [illegible] was signed at Appomattox Court House and [illegible] that its future would be [illegible] set it aside. At the time of the surrender [illegible] distinguished did not present themselves until [illegible] half an hour after they had met. They smoked their cigars and chatted about their families and other purely private matters. Finally the conversation turned to the war and the causes of Lee's surrender.

"During the course [illegible] Lee remarked to Grant that he was unable to account for the disappearance of his supply train. Had he not have lost it, Lee said that he would not be in the situation he then was. Sheridan, who stood at the back of the noted confederate general's chair, was perfectly aware of what had become of the supply train, for he captured it. Turning to General Ord, he gave a [illegible] wink that could Lee have seen it, would have solved the conundrum as to the fate of the supplies.

"In the [illegible] of the table is a nick about one inch long and probably a quarter of an inch deep. This was caused by the hilt of General Lee's sword striking the table when [illegible] rose after signing the paper. The particle chip fell off on the floor, but General Sheridan picked it up and put it in his pocket. I do not know what became of it."

Continuing the lady said that the table Mrs. General Ord has and which she thinks was the one upon which Lee's surrender was signed, was not the table it is purported to be, although it is one of great historic value. It is the one upon which General Gibbon wrote the order that was afterward signed by Grant announcing Lee's surrender. General Custer was present at the time and, after the other parties had left the room, seized the table and hoisted it out of the window, telling one of his men to take care of it for him.

"SNAPPER" GARRISON.

A Man Who Has Won Peace and Many Friends.

They call him "Snapper" Garrison. What his Christian name really is no one seems to care and very few people probably know. But they talk about him all the same, and for the benefit of those who care to know, it is Edward H. In fact, "Snapper" Garrison is one of the most talked of youngsters in the country just now, especially among people who are interested in running horses. Why? Because he has made for himself a big record as a jockey, that means fame and plenty of it of a certain sort, and many a majority of the real hundred cents to the dollar kind.

Snapper Garrison has been working hard to attain the proud position he occupies in the eye of the sporting world for a long time, but the achievement which made him there was accomplished only the other day, when he beat the Dwyer Brothers' celebrated Hanover Monmouth Park [illegible] with Ben Brush, another of the [illegible] horses equal to Hanover. Of course his success was [illegible] to the fact that the Dwyers [illegible] the Hanover trouble, but it [illegible] for [illegible] Garrison [illegible] that it was a [illegible] with the [illegible] [illegible] Edward H. [illegible] was born in New Haven, Conn., [illegible] years ago. When [illegible] 20 years old he entered [illegible] Pocahontas Valley home, and there was [illegible] as a bright amiable boy, with a model disposition, which, the superintendent believed, would one day make him famous as a jockey. Three years later he went back to New Haven to live with his mother, his father having died [illegible] years before. His fourth birthday after that time he went to live with [illegible] Daly, in [illegible] he has made $30,000 this season so far, [illegible] for [illegible] S. Brown a stable [illegible] $12,000 from the J. R. Hazen stable. He stands 5 feet 5 inches, is modest in [illegible] and pretty [illegible] a lady.

LONG BRANCH.

A STUDY OF HUMANITY FROM GOAT AND PIER.

How People Fight for Places on the "Last Steamer" to New York—Struggle of a Boy and a Dog with the Surf—A Flute Player's Fingers.

LONG BRANCH waters are getting to be decidedly cool for bathers by this time, and the season is drawing to a close. Despite the grand exodus of summer residents has largely thinned as well looked though, [illegible] has been [illegible] of great [illegible] of mankind to [illegible] and the [illegible] no peace on the footstool where he can be studied to better advantage, neither with the female of the species. I [illegible] trip of a Branch from New York and return. At least that's the conclusion arrived at by the present writer when he made the trip the other day [illegible] with an artist, who is forever sketching everything he sees. The proper way to enjoy the sea trip from the wharflights to All Like [illegible] afternoon boat down and back without landing and the breakfast that will most impress you if you do that will be the scramble of the crowd to get good places on the return trip, which will be the last one for the day. As the boat approaches the place it will be noted that the structure is fairly swarming with people waiting to take passage home. They are penned off in lots of 500 or [illegible] each, and bear their restraint impatiently while the incoming [illegible] crowd. Perhaps there is a good sized sea on, and this, of course, makes the debarkation all the slower, though it renders the scene much more [illegible] ing.

When at length the last shore bound [illegible] has left the boat and the first [illegible] is [illegible], the [illegible] waiting ones pour [illegible] from the pier and up the undulating gangway to the boat with a rush and a push and a scramble that is highly exciting to the onlooker, but [illegible] to the [illegible] that happens to catch [illegible] and then [illegible] who has his [illegible] fails to be sure footed, and falls by the way. For the [illegible] behind are apt to march right over them like a victorious army [illegible] on the enemy's works, and [illegible] of [illegible] in this [illegible] caught the [illegible] of the boot of the colossus the other day, and the [illegible] that the sketch he furnished of the [illegible] host is not at all [illegible]. Peculiarly [illegible] to the hurrying crowd are the complacent smirks of those wise people who are making the trip solely for the sea air, and, remaining on the boat, are, of course, already [illegible] city seated in ample [illegible] at dinner.

During the [illegible] the view from the pier and [illegible] the shore near by is very [illegible] for [illegible] pictures of the [illegible] life in the vicinity. Those who don't [illegible] [illegible] were fond of watching the [illegible] and the summer [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
